300 Women Complete Digital Skills Training

Halfway through our digital literacy programme, 300 women from self-help groups have completed training in digital payments, record keeping and online safety.

Many participants now accept payments by QR code at their shops and keep simple sales records on their phones.

Voices from the Field

“I used to depend on my son for every payment. Now I do it myself,” shared a participant who runs a tailoring business.

Confidence is the first skill we teach.

— Programme Director

Trainer Development

Twenty community trainers completed a refresher on teaching online selling.

Partnerships

We partnered with a local bank branch to help participants open accounts.

What We Learned

Evening sessions improved attendance during the sowing season.

Thank You, Volunteers

Student volunteers helped design practice cards in the local language.
